

Hear Directly From Your Peers

The American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry is here for you, whether you are just starting out or already leading your practice. See how your peers have found inspiration, guidance, and real success through AACD membership.

For Those Who Want to Stand Out Sean Aiken, DMD, MS

Sean Aiken, DMD, MS, was in search of a vetted education and a trustworthy professional community to advance his practice.

"AACD connects you to top professionals because you have to meet certain standards to be a member" he says. "AACD has a vetting process so you know the material is solid and peer-reviewed. It takes the guesswork out of whether your investment is worth it."

From Scratch to Stunning Jocelynn Vida Sustaita, DMD

Jocelynn Vida Sustaita, DMD, aimed to gain the confidence, credentials, and community needed to establish and elevate a successful cosmetic dental practice.

"AACD gives you the confidence to see the world as an aesthetic dentist. It trains your eye, refines your artistry, and expands what you believe is possible," she says. "You walk away not just with new techniques, but with renewed energy and connection. We're constantly evolving, growing, and perfecting our craft—and that's something to be proud of."

A Life-Changing Journey Devin McClintock, DDS

Devin McClintock, DDS, sought to find clarity and confidence in cosmetic dentistry early in her career.

"I have an incredible network of professionals I can turn to for advice on cases or diagnoses," Devin explains.

"When patients choose me, they're not just getting my expertise—they're gaining the collective knowledge of thousands of doctors I can lean on."
